

A NOTE FROM

Jennifer Lawrence

From a young age I have held a special place in my heart for children and adults with Down Syndrome. When I met Andy Strunk in the 6th grade, I knew I had met a very special guy as well as a lifelong friend!

My friendship with Andy has driven me to become involved with organizations like St. Mary's Center and the Special Olympics. I am so excited to announce that I have been named the official ambassador of the Special Olympics! I am looking forward to working with them!

This particular event on November 20 is to raise money for St. Mary's Center in Louisville. I thought that using a screening of The Hunger Games: Catching Fire would be the perfect opportunity. I have covered all costs for this event so that all the money raised can go directly to this amazing organization.

Although I am not able to attend the Louisville screening of the movie, I will be there in spirit. I am asking you to give generously, so that children and adults with intellectual disabilities, like my good friend Andy, will continue to have a place to go to learn.

Thanks!

Jennifer
